

Can “Formal Theology” Ground a Religion for Science, or, a Religion for Scientists?

Abstract

In my old manuscript “Formal Theology” that now is out as a preprint I show that science and theology can be founded upon the same set of basic assumptions. I now follow up this idea with the thought that Formal Theology may be used to ground also a religion. “Religion“, in this regard, as related to beliefs. I’m not going into any details, neither concerning the original manuscript, nor this new idea. The important thing, I think, is to explore if this kind of “religion”, in any way, can be accommodated with “ordinary” religions. I leave more rigorous work to myself or to others for the future.

Reference

Johan Gamper. (2023). Formal Theology. Qeios. doi:10.32388/EMANIB.
(Also on philpapers [<https://philpapers.org/rec/GAMFTK>])