Jonathan Y. H. Sim is an instructor in the department of philosophy at the University of Singapore. He has observed that many students from two years ago and they still fondly remember various activities and courses they took. These learning activities may be somewhat theatrical. But they help in generating strong emotions in the learners, which reinvigorate their interest in learning and motivates them to solve the problems.