

PALGRAVE STUDIES IN RELATIONAL SOCIOLOGY

FROM TARDE TO DELEUZE & FOUCAULT

The Infinitesimal
Revolution

SERGIO TONKONOFF

Palgrave Studies in Relational
Sociology

Series Editor
François Dépelteau
Laurentian University
Sudbury, Canada

In various disciplines such as archeology, psychology, psychoanalysis, international relations, and philosophy, we have seen the emergence of relational approaches or theories. This series seeks to further develop relational sociology through the publication of diverse theoretical and empirical research—including that which is critical of the relational approach. In this respect, the goal of the series is to explore the advantages and limits of relational sociology. The series welcomes contributions related to various thinkers, theories, and methods clearly associated with relational sociology (such as Bourdieu, critical realism, Deleuze, Dewey, Elias, Latour, Luhmann, Mead, network analysis, symbolic interactionism, Tarde, and Tilly). Multidisciplinary studies which are relevant to relational sociology are also welcome, as well as research on various empirical topics (such as education, family, music, health, social inequalities, international relations, feminism, ethnicity, environmental issues, politics, culture, violence, social movements, and terrorism). Relational sociology—and more specifically, this series—will contribute to change and support contemporary sociology by discussing fundamental principles and issues within a relational framework.

More information about this series at <http://www.springer.com/series/15100>

Sergio Tonkonoff

From Tarde to Deleuze and Foucault

The Infinitesimal Revolution

palgrave
macmillan

CONTENTS

Microsociology, Micropolitics, and Microphysics: Toward the Paradigm of Infinitesimal Difference	1
The Whole and the Parts: From Compte to Structuralism	6
The (Micro)parts and the (Un)whole	10
A Science of the Infinite	13
Another Beginning: From Tarde to Post-structuralism	17
Notes	20
Tarde and the Infinitesimal Sociology	25
Elemental Sociology	28
Polygenesis, Dromology, and Cartographic Knowledge	32
Societal Ensembles	35
Tarde Today	39
Notes	42
Individuals, Publics, and Crowds. Where Does Social Change Come From?	45
Social Life as Somnambulism	47
Magnetism and Urbanization	49
Crowds and Publics	52
Opposition and Invention	57
Invention and Inventors	60
Micro-Politics of Conversation	62
Notes	63

Diffusion or War? Foucault as a Reader of Tarde	67
The Nietzsche Hypothesis (The War Model)	69
The Old Cartographer	72
The New Cartographer	76
Tardean Solutions to Foucauldian Problems?	80
The Tarde Hypothesis	84
Notes	87
Desire, Assemblages, Machines. Deleuze et al.	91
A New Step (and Its Shadow)	94
Machinic Assemblages and Abstract Machines	97
Lines, Flows, Escapes	101
Contagion: Tarde in Deleuze (and Vice Versa)	105
Desire and Society	110
Notes	111
The Reason for Being of the Finite	115
Social Field: What Could Be a Pure Relation?	118
What Is a Social Force?	123
Ensemble/Device/Assemblage	129
Image-Movement, Cartographic Knowledge, and Molecular Change	134
Notes	139
Bibliography	141
Index	149