Notes on Contributors

Eva van Baarle

is assistant professor of Military Ethics and Philosophy at the Netherlands Defence Academy. In 2018, she obtained her doctorate with her research into fostering the moral competence of military personnel through ethics education. She is currently involved in the action research 'Towards a socially safe Defence culture' as project leader. In addition to her work at the Netherlands Defence organisation, she is conducting research in collaboration with the Amsterdam UMC (VUmc department) into the further professionalisation of ethics support in healthcare and into promoting a 'just culture' in healthcare organisations.

Marjon Blom-Terhell has been employed in the Netherlands Defence organisation at the Royal Netherlands Marechaussee since 2003. In addition to various managerial and staff positions, she has also worked as an assistant professor of military ethics, leadership and human resource management at the Netherlands Defence Academy. She currently serves as Brigade Commander Zeeland West-Brabant.

Christine Boshuijzen-Van Burken

works as a researcher at the University of New South Wales (UNSW) at the Australian Defence Force Academy (ADFA) in Canberra, Australia. She holds degrees in Human Kinetic Engineering (BSC), Mechanical Engineering (BSC) and Christian Studies of Science and Society (MA). She has held positions at the Netherlands Defence Academy, Delft University of Technology, Eindhoven University of Technology, Erasmus University Rotterdam and Linnaeus University in Sweden. Before starting her doctoral research, she worked in industry. Christine is a reservist in the National Reserve Corps.

G.J. van Doorn

is an academic lecturer on Leadership, Ethics and HRM at the Netherlands Defence Academy (NLDA), and a personal, executive and team coach on call for the Expertise Centre for Defense Management (ECLD). His research focuses on the ontological and epistemological foundations of coaching as 'the new leadership', including its implications for practitioners.

Miriam de Graaff

is a psychologist and communication scientist. She obtained a doctorate at the University of Twente for studying moral dilemmas and decision-making in complex situations. She currently works as head of the Centre of Expertise for Communication & Engagement within the Royal Netherlands Armed Forces, and has her own organisational advice and training agency 'KreOs Leiderschap & Ethiek'. In 2015 she was nominated for the Young Talent Award of the Dutch Women in Leadership election.

Eric-Hans Kramer

is full professor of Military Management and Organisation at the Netherlands Defence Academy. Previously, he was associate professor of Human Factors and System Safety at the same institute. He has conducted various studies into organisational issues in the military and in setting up research and education in the field of psychosocial dynamics for organisations acting as instruments of force.

Herman Kuipers

is emeritus professor of Sociotechnical organizational analysis at Eindhoven University of Technology and emeritus professor of Organisational Psychology at the Royal Military Academy in Breda. After his retirement he was active as an independent consultant and researcher at Bos & Kuipers. In his work for the foundation Promotum Promovendi he was involved in assisting external doctoral students.

Tine Molendijk

is a cultural anthropologist with a cross-disciplinary orientation, specialised in the themes of violence, military culture and mental health, particularly post-traumatic stress disorder and moral injury. In 2020 she obtained a doctorate at Radboud University with her research into the role of political practices and public perceptions in moral injury among Srebrenica and Afghanistan veterans. She is currently an assistant professor at the Netherlands Defence Academy, and heads an NWO NWA research project focused on contextual aspects of moral injury among both military and police personnel.

Peter Olsthoorn

is associate professor of Military Leadership and Ethics at the Netherlands Defence Academy. He lectures in the fields of ethics, public administration, leadership and media. In addition, he teaches Human Rights and Ethics in the Frontex master programme. So far, his research has focused on military ethics, leadership, drones and border control.

Désirée Verweij

is professor of Philosophy and Ethics at the Netherlands Defence Academy and at the Centre for International Conflict Analysis and Management (CICAM) at Radboud University Nijmegen. Her research concerns both fundamental and applied ethics and includes themes associated with both the individual level and the socio-political level of military ethics. These themes include 'moral judgment', 'responsibility', 'recognition', 'human rights', and the 'tradition of just war'.
