Background on Kant's Philosophy (hermeneutical historical situation)

In Kant there are great multitudes of ideas and themes within his writings and philosophy. Kant's ideas are a flood of ideas for philosophers. Where does Kant's own critical philosophy fit between rationalism and faith, between deism and theism, between some versions of dogmatism, skepticism and common sense?

In the Dohna-Wundlacken Logic (1792), Kant said, "Dogmatism and skepticism are opposed to one another" (Lectures on Logic, et. page 479, AK 24:745). He then goes and states his position, "Criticism is the middle way between dogmatism and skepticism, the principle of a rightful trust in one's use of reason" (Lectures on Logic, et. page 480, AK 24:745). Kant then goes on to talk about the three major steps taken by metaphysics historically. Kant wrote in 1793, "Thus, philosophy has gone through three stages in regard to metaphysics. The first was the stage of dogmatism, the second skepticism, and third the criticism of pure reason". (What Real Progress has Metaphysics Made in Germany Since the Time of Leibniz and Wolff? et. page 61).

Historical Frame:

From 1774 to about 1800, there were three intense philosophical and theological controversies underway in Germany, namely: Fragments Controversy, the Pantheism Controversy, and the Atheism Controversy (see later notes). Covering Kant from the age of 50 until the age 76.

Kant's philosophy and theology is entangled and intertwined in the following positions both for and against. Indeed, other lesser-known philosophers are in-between Kant and these different philosophical positions. Kant's philosophy did not drop out of the sky. The warp and weft of many of these ideas flowed through Kant.

For example, philosophers like, Johann Georg Sulzer (1720-1779) (Wolffian and a translator of David Hume An Enquiry Concerning the Principles of Morals into German in 1755), Johann August Eberhard, (a Wolffian, 1739-1809), and Johann Georg Heinrich Feder (1740-1821). Another interesting example, Johann Hamann wrote to Johann Herder in 1779, that Kant always had books of Johann Nikolaus Tetens, (1736-1807) open on his desk and he was a well-known German follower of David Hume. These examples are just to give you some basic 'signs' on the way to building a comprehensive view of Kant and his philosophy as it developed in the context of these philosophers, theologians, and intellectuals. In other words, the interweaving and currents of the intellectual period of 1760-1800s is in reality a lot more complex than just these simple -isms; but these can be used as some guideposts as you make your own way. From "-isms" and "-ismology"; but rather, to turn to the matter themselves "to the things themselves," or if you prefer, "Zu den Sachen selbst" (Hegel and Husserl).

Nonetheless, we must get beyond these mere philosophical labels, as I think F.W.J. Schelling, who is the one philosopher who understood this deep insight best when he wrote:

"It cannot be denied that it is a splendid invention to be able to designate entire points of view at once with such general epithets. If one has once discovered the right label for a system, everything else follows of its own accord and one is spared the trouble of investigating its essential characteristics in greater detail. Even an ignorant person can render judgment upon the most carefully thought out ideas as soon as they are presented to him with the help of such labels. But, after all, in an extraordinary assertion of this kind, everything depends upon the closer definition of the concept.” (from Philosophical Investigations into the Essence of Human Freedom, 1809, translation by Joan Stambaugh).

Or, as Moses Mendelssohn said, “I fear that, in the end, the famous debate among materialists, idealists, and dualists amounts to a merely verbal dispute that is more a matter for the linguist than for the speculative philosopher” (1785. October. Morning hours or lectures about God's existence, Morgenstunden oder Vorlesungen über das Dasein Gottes).

The sandbox version of Kant is that he was reacting against David Hume and skepticism; and we can add that the rest of Kant's reactions are in the historical details. Some Kantians have lost sight of these details. Kantians need to get beyond the first 70 pages of the Critique of Pure Reason; since we now have over 7000 pages of Kant in recent these English translations.

Kant did not live in a glass or ivory tower above everyone; he was deeply involved with other philosophers and intellectuals. Christian Garve's review (1782, January 19) of the Critique of Pure Reason in the Göttingischen Anzeigen von gelehrten Sachen ("Göttingen Learned Advertiser") (shorten by Johann Georg Heinrich Feder); really stung and hurt Kant and he respond in some of his published writings Prolegomena to Any Future Metaphysics that Will Henceforth Come Forward as a Science (1783); and in Groundwork of the Metaphysics of Morals (1785). Of course, Kant made extensive changes for the second edition of the Critique of Pure Reason (1787). Kant's letter to Johann Bering “new, highly revised edition of my Critique” (7 April 1786. AK 10:441).

Historical note: Immanuel Kant started his first lectures at Albertus-Universität Königsberg in the winter semester of 1755-1756. The topics were logic, metaphysics, mathematics, and physics. Moreover, by the year 1796 (some 42 years later) he was still teaching logic and metaphysics according to Steve Naragon a sum total of 56 times for logic and 53 times on metaphysics during Kant long teaching career. Kant completed teaching 284 courses by 1796.

Immanuel Kant wrote in 1772,

“In metaphysics, like an unknown land of which we intend to take possession, we have first assiduously (fleißig) investigated its situation and access to it. (It lies in the (area) hemisphere of pure reason;) we have even drawn the outline of where this island of cognition (Erkenntnis) is connected by bridges to the land of experience, and where it is separated by a deep sea; we have even drawn its outline and are as it were acquainted with its geography (ichnography), but we do not know what might be found in this land, which is maintained to be uninhabitable by some people and to be their real domicile by others.” (Notes and Fragments, et. page 136. AK 17:559. 4458. 1772. ξ. M XI. E II 1134.)

Kant uses a fantasy island metaphor to talk about metaphysics in the year 1772. Kant did in fact leave Königsberg and actually saw the Baltic Sea near the town of Pillau (now known as Baltiysk). He got seasick. (die Seekrankheit, AK 7:169). For the record Kant also traveled farther inland to Goldap (according to Kant: A Biography, Kuehn, page 450). Kant’s life and circumstances influenced his writing and his thinking.

Kant’s philosophical thinking was against these movements. Kant Contra.

Against Pyrrho, Sextus Empiricus, David Hume, Johann Georg Sulzer, Johann Nikolaus Tetens and the general skeptical tradition. Gottlob Ernst Schulze skeptical attack against Kant in his book was titled: Aenesidemus (1792). 1792. Kant wrote to his friend, Jakob Sigismund Beck, December 4, 1792. AK 11:395).

"Under the assumed name of Aenesidemus, an even wider skepticism has been advanced, namely, that we cannot know at all whether our representations correspond to anything else (as object), which is as much as to say: whether a representation is a representation (stands for anything).”

Kant said in his lectures (1782-1783),

“Something similar to a critique of pure reason was found with David Hume, but he sank into the wildest and most inconsolable speculation over this, and that happened easily because he did not study reason completely, but rather only this or that concept. An investigation of practices (facti), how we arrive at cognition, where from experience or though pure reason. Locke accomplished much here..." (Lectures on Metaphysics, et. page 137. AK 29:781).

Against the Sturm und Drang (Storm and Urge (stress) movement (especially, Kant's former student – Johann Herder and also Kant's friend Johann Hamann). This movement included some big names for awhile: Johann Wolfgang von Goethe and Friedrich Schiller.

Against Pantheism (Gotthold Ephraim Lessing, Baruch Spinoza).

Against Faith (Glaube, the German word for: "faith" or "belief"), as revelation and a kind of mysticism. Faith as the base of a personal God, Friedrich Heinrich Jacobi. So, it is not reason or metaphysics or philosophy that is the answer to our fundamental questions – but only by faith will we find our required answers.

Against fanaticism (fanatics) or enthusiasm (Schwärmerei).

Against Common sense (Moses Mendelssohn's version).

Against Dogmatism (Christian Wolff, at least the Kantian version of Wolffian dogmatism). Wolff's philosophia rationalis.

Against rational metaphysics (attacked by Kant in 1st Critique of Pure Reason).

Against idealism. See Kant's "Refutation of Idealism", 2nd edition Critique of Pure Reason, 1787. (B274-B279). Against Cartesian skepticism or some version of Descartes idealism.

Against a version of Baruch Spinoza (atheism, nihilism (word first used by Friedrich Heinrich Jacobi), fatalism, no personal God or Deism vs. Theism. Accordingly, Spinoza was considered to believe in pantheism, atheism, nihilism, fatalism, and no personal God. Direct path: metaphysics leads to pantheism, pantheism is really Spinozism, Spinozism is fatalism, and fatalism is in fact, and finally: just simply, Spinozism is atheism. Potentially all philosophy and all metaphysics, therefore, leads to atheism too. These atheistic fears were whipped up against all philosophers of the time. Kant was of course – contra atheism and the Spinozism of the time.

In 1789 August 30 Kant's letter to Friedrich Heinrich Jacobi.

"I have always thought it my duty to show respect for men of talent, science, and justice, no matter how far our opinions may differ. You will, I hope, appraise my essay on orientation, in the Berlinische Monatsschrift, from this perspective. I was requested by various people to cleanse myself of the suspicion of Spinozism, and therefore, contrary to my inclination, I wrote this essay. I hope you will find in it no trace of deviation from the principle I have just affirmed. With inner pain I have read some other attacks upon your views and those of some of your worthy friends, and I have even spoken out against such attacks". (AK 11:76-77). The essay that Kant wrote in his response discussed here in the letter was What Does it Mean to Orient Oneself in Thinking? "Was heißt: sich im Denken orientieren?" (1786).

Against the version of Spinoza's nonanthropocentrism.

Against Systems as such (in Spinoza's and Rene Descartes's view).

Against some version of Johann Hamann's countering of Rationalism with Awakening (Enweckung).

Against Berkeley. Example, Kant wrote to his friend, Jakob Sigismund Beck, December 4, 1792. AK 11:395).

"Herren Eberhard's and Garve's opinion that Berkeleyan Idealism is identical to Critical Idealism (which I could better call "the principle of the ideality of space and time") does not deserve the slightest attention. " Kant wanted to eviscerate these early forms of idealism.

Contra: Immanuel Kant used the expression "rational faith" (Vernunftglaube). See his later work: Religion within the Bounds of Bare Reason (German: Die Religion innerhalb der Grenzen der bloßen Vernunft) (1793). And Kant use of the term in: What Does it Mean to Orient Oneself in Thinking? "Was heißt: sich im Denken orientieren?" (1786).

Kant's rationalism is a special limited view of rationalism, an empirical, practical, based on freedom; and yet, rationalism and reason is still the chief source and anvil of Kant's truth. Thus, it is not Hume's skepticism, nor Mendelssohn's common sense and his form of old rational metaphysics (Kant denied this in the first Critique); certainly not the rational dogmatism of Wolff (in fact, some part of Wolff's philosophy was empiricism). In addition, Kant did not see Friedrich Heinrich Jacobi's concepts of revelation or faith as the only acceptable and final answer in metaphysics or theological disputes. Kant has also rejected the empiricism version of John Locke (1632-1704) in the first Critique of Pure Reason in 1781.

Kant's new brand of philosophy mixes in his concept of freedom and practical morality to find the answer for Kant's critical and enlightenment philosophy. Even though Kant lived in isolation in northern Prussia and he did not travel outside of region; he still wanted to be cosmopolitan in outlook and worldview. Many of Kant's friends did know the English language. So he was aware of the broader philosophical developments even in the English speaking world of the time.

Kant often wanted more from metaphysics, ontology, and philosophy than they could give back to him; hence, his general passage into theology. The elder Kant wants to open up some kind of access and relationship to the supersensible (Übersinnliches). Note: Kant like teaching his theology lectures (4 times, 1774, 1783-84, 1785-86, 1787). Kant was believer in God but he went out his way never to go into a church during his adult life. Interesting Kant's only brother Johann Heinrich Kant (1735-1800): Pastor in Alt-Rahden, 1758-75 Hauslehrer in Kurland, 1775 Conrector und Rector der Stadtschule Mitau, 1781 Pfarrer in Alt-Rahden (Vecsaule), Kurland (Latvia); and hence, was a pastor most of his life. Kant had little contact with his brother later in life and only exchanged a few letters. On the death of his brother (1800), Immanuel Kant did setup an annual payment to his widow (Maria Kant).

According to John Zammito, Immanuel Kant had made a strong ethical turn and breakthrough in the first four month of 1790. As with most philosophical issues, most especially in Kant's thinking there are many mixed messages, see for example, his essay on the conflict between the philosophy faculty and the theology faculty, written around 1794 (AK 7:17-26). Indeed, Kant always wanted "more", in fact lots 'more'; but his intellectual honesty was a deep part of his mind set. This warp and weft is basic feature of Kant's philosophical writings. Given the fact of how much of Kant's philosophy has been worked-on and re-worked (ramifying) these features can be clearly seen in the larger Kantian tradition. Kant had lectured at the University for 41 years and had been active writing philosophy from first philosophical work in 1749 at age 29.

Strictly speaking, Kant did not have a complete plan for his system when he first started down the long path of his philosophical development. Two letters by Kant give you an idea of his own outlines of his philosophical planning. The first was his plans for the book that became the Critique of Pure Reason (1781).

First plan.

Kant letter 1772,

“...and was then making plans for a work that might perhaps have the title, "The Limits of Sense and Reason." I planned to have it consist of two parts, a theoretical and a practical. The first part would have two sections, (1) general phenomenology and (2) metaphysics, but this only with regard to its nature and method. The second part likewise would have two sections, (1) the universal principles of feeling, taste, and sensuous desire and (2) the basic principles of morality.”

To Marcus Herz, February 21, 1772. (AK 10:129-130).

Second plan.

Kant's overall plan for his metaphysical system can be seen from this letter.

“I shall be glad when I have finished my transcendental philosophy, which is actually a critique of pure reason, as then I can turn to metaphysics, which has only two parts, the metaphysics of nature and the metaphysics of morals, of which I shall present the latter first. I therefore look forward to the future.” To Marcus Herz, toward end of 1773. (AK 10:145).

Kant's great system was seen as a work in-progress by contemporaries; and of course this led to the greatness of Johann Gottlieb Fichte (1762-1814), early Friedrich Wilhelm Joseph Schelling, G.W.F. Hegel, and the later Schelling. Even though the later Schelling's philosophy was not a philosophical system to be followed; but rather, many philosophers critical engaged Schelling and were able to move on their own path as the Hegelian schools started to come apart. Friedrich Wilhelm Joseph Schelling's "so called students" at the Berlin University in 1841, Lecture Hall No. 6, were interesting mix: Søren Kierkegaard, Mikhail Bakunin, Jacob Burckhardt, Otto Ranke, Arnold Ruge, Alexander von Humboldt, and Friedrich Engels. Afterwards, they all attacked Schelling. Indirectly, there was also the influence through Engels to Karl Marx (see Marx's letter to Feuerbach, October 3, 1843 against Schelling). Schelling has his own way of re-thinking philosophical ideas – but not as Kant's critical philosophy. Kant's openness was function of his own mind and his exceptional intellectual honesty. Therefore, Kant's critical philosophy was seen as a starting point and not a completed system or as a finish system, and not having a finalized endpoint. Kant famously said at the end of the first Critique of Pure Reason (1781) where it says, "The critical path alone remains open." ("Der kritische Weg ist allein noch offen." AK 3:552).

In fact, so many philosophical paths were open and taken after Kant, and most of them would not have pleased Kant. Even beyond Kant's public statements against Fichte at the end, in private, he was even more upset over Fichte's philosophy and Kant wanted to make sure he was no longer connected to Fichte in the public eye. Kant wanted followers and so having major parts of the popular philosophical world going off recklessly following Friedrich Heinrich Jacobi (faith) or Gotthold Ephraim Lessing (pantheism) or Mendelssohn (common sense and old rational metaphysics) or Herder and Hamann; so in fact, this did not bode well for the followers or the popular option of Kant's own critical philosophy. I think that Kant was partial involved in the Atheism Controversy (1798-1800) and since his named was linked with Fichte (who was dismissed from Jena University in 1799 for Atheism). Johann Gottlieb Fichte was attacked by Jacobi in 1799. The elder Kant had to distance himself as much as possible from alleged Atheism of Johann Gottlieb Fichte.

Thus, we see Kant's own public and clever attack against Fichte in 1799 (7 August); the title is: Declaration Regarding Fichte's Wissenschaftslehre (Erklärung in Beziehung auf Fichte's Wissenschaftslehre). (AK 12:370-71). Again this is Kant telling his followers – Kant is to be read and one should not take anyone else's version of Kant's philosophy as being correct. As we have seen on this account, Johann Gottlieb Fichte was not Kant's heir apparent after all. In fact, he was pushed out of the fold by Kant. Kant wrote this about his former friend Fichte:

“Since the reviewer finally maintains that the Critique is not to be taken literally in what it says about sensibility and that anyone who wants to understand the Critique must first master the requisite standpoint (of Beck or of Fichte), because Kant's precise words, like Aristotle's, will destroy the spirit, I therefore declare again that the Critique is to be understood by considering exactly what it says and that it requires only the common standpoint that any mind sufficiency cultivated in such abstract investigations will bring to it.” (AK 12: 371). 1799.

Kant wrote in the Preface to the second edition of the Critique of Pure Reason (1787), “Thus, I had to deny knowledge in order to make room for faith.” (Ich mußte also das Wissen aufheben, um zum Glauben Platz zu bekommen) (AK 3:19 Kritik der reinen Vernunft).

One of most famous of Kant quotes date from 1788:

“Two things fill the mind with ever-increasing wonder and awe, the more often and the more intensely the mind of thought is drawn to them: the starry heavens above me and the moral law within me.” Critique of Practical Reason (Kritik der praktischen Vernunft (1788). “Zwei Dinge erfüllen das Gemüt mit immer neuer und zunehmender Bewunderung und Ehrfurcht, je öfter und anhaltender sich das Nachdenken damit beschäftigt: der bestirnte Himmel über mir und das moralische Gesetz in mir.” Kritik der praktischen. Seite 161 (AK 5:161).

The following note from the elder Kant, I find to be very interesting in the overall understanding of what Kant thought he was actually doing. This note is from his later period, and the date is from around 1797. Pages: AK 18:667 to AK 18:668. Notation on timeline for this note: ω4: 1796 - 1798. Dated time lines of these hand written notes by Erich Adickes and his assistant Friedrich Berger. Adickes came up with 22 distinct time periods in which to sort Kant's hand written notes (Nachlaß). This note is dated toward the end of Kant's life. Kant died in 1804 at age 79. From:

Notes and Fragments by Kant. 6343. 1796–98 (around May 1797). LBI D 12. P. I.

“The final aim of all metaphysics is to ascend from the cognition of the sensible to that of the supersensible. Now the Critique of Pure Reason proves that this can never be accomplished in a theoretical respect, but it can very well be done in a morally-practical respect by means of the transcendental concept of freedom, which in respect to the theoretical faculty of cognition is [crossed out: fully] transcendent and absolutely inexplicable and indemonstrable, but which with respect to the pure practical faculty (determinable through pure reason alone) has indubitable reality through the categorical imperative. – The reality of the concept of freedom, however, inevitably brings with it the doctrine of the ideality of objects as objects of intuition in space and time. For if these intuitions were not merely subjective forms of sensibility, but rather of objects in themselves, then their practical use, i.e., actions, would depend entirely on the mechanism of nature, and freedom together with its consequence, morality, would be annihilated.” (AK 18:667-668).

Historical Framing:

From 1774 to about 1800, there were three intense philosophical and theological controversies underway in Germany, namely: Fragments Controversy, the Pantheism Controversy, and the Atheism Controversy.

Lessing’s first quarrel. Fragments Controversy.

Fragments Controversy (Fragmentenstreit) 1774-1778. Fragments by an Anonymous Writer (Wolfenbüttel Fragments). By Hermann S. Reimarus (1694-1768). Zur Geschichte und Literatur. Deist writings, published anonymously by Gotthold Ephraim Lessing. Started the Fragment Quarrel (Fragmentenstreit). Lessing was famously attacked by Johann Melchior Goeze (1717-1786).

Kant owned these two books:

Reimarus, Hermann Samuel. Die Vernunftlehre, als eine Anweisung zum richtigen Gebrauche der Vernunft in der Erkenntnis der Wahrheit, aus zweo ganz natürlichen Regeln der Einstimmung und des Widerspruchs hergeleitet... (Hamburg, 1756).

Reimarus, Hermann Samuel. Anhang von der verschiedenen Determination der Naturkräfte, und ihren mancherley Stufen, zur Erläuterung der zehnten Capitels (1762).

1775. Philosophical Conversations. By Mendelssohn

1778. On the Aims of Jesus and His Disciples (Von dem Zwecke Jesu und seiner Jünger). By Hermann Samuel Reimarus. Published by Gotthold Ephraim Lessing.

1779. Nathan the Wise (Nathan der Weise). This is a play by Gotthold Ephraim Lessing, written in winter of 1778-1779. Note: this play takes place during the Third Crusade in Jerusalem in the year 1192.

Pantheism Controversy or Pantheism Quarrel starts.

Pantheismusstreit.

1780. 5-6 July in Wolfenbüttel, which is a town in Lower Saxony, Germany, located on the Oker River. Friedrich Heinrich Jacobi meets and held discussions with Gotthold Ephraim Lessing (who was the librarian at the Wolfenbüttel library (Duke of Brunswick's Herzog-August-Bibliothek). Lessing makes two unforgettable remarks that really stings Jacobi. The first remark is about theology and Lessing expression was "One and All" (Greek is "hen kai pan" ("ἓν καὶ Πᾶν)); this means pantheism. Second remark is that Lessing said, "There is no philosophy other than Spinoza". This is the starting point and core of the whole famous Pantheism Controversy. What does this mean for philosophy? Many philosophers in Germany at the time considered Spinoza to be an atheist. Following any one that was called an atheist was extremely controversial at this time, Kant wanted to avoid any connection to Spinozism at all cost (See also 1789 August 30. Kant's letter to Jacobi (AK 11:76-77).

Atheism dispute (Atheismusstreit) starts.

1798 to 1799. Atheism dispute (Atheismusstreit). Friedrich Karl Forberg and Fichte. Development of the concept of religion (Entwicklung des Begriffs der Religion). By Friedrich Karl Forberg. Published in the Philosophisches Journal 8, 1, pages 21-46, edited by Johann Gottlieb Fichte.

1798. On the Ground of Our Belief in a Divine World-Governance (Über den Grund unsers Glaubens an eine göttliche Weltregierung). By Johann Gottlieb Fichte.

1799. On Religion: Speeches to its Cultured Despisers (Über die Religion: reden an die Gebildeten unter ihren Verächtern). By Friedrich Schleiermacher (1768-1834).

1799. Open Letter to Fichte (Sendschreiben an Fichte). By Friedrich Heinrich Jacobi. Used the term nihilism (maybe first usage).

1799. 1 April. Johann Gottlieb Fichte is dismissed from University of Jena. Flees to Berlin.

1799. 7 August. Declaration Regarding Fichte's Wissenschaftslehre (Erklärung in Beziehung auf Fichte's Wissenschaftslehre). By Kant. (AK 12:370-371).

Kant says at the end,

“Nevertheless the critical philosophy must remain confident of its irresistible propensity to satisfy the theoretical as well as the moral, practical purposes of reason, confident that no change of opinions, no touching up or reconstruction into some other form, is in store for it; the system of the Critique rests on a fully secured foundation, established forever; it will prove to be indispensable too for the noblest ends of mankind in all future ages.” (AK 12: 371).

1799. 5 July. Fichte questioned by police in Berlin.

1800. January. From a Private Letter (Aus einem Privatschreiben). By Johann Gottlieb Fichte.

1800. January. The Vocation of Man (Die Bestimmung des Menschen). By Johann Gottlieb Fichte.

1800. September. Concluding remarks by the Editor. By Johann Gottlieb Fichte.

1802. July. Faith and Knowledge (Glauben und Wissen). By G.W.F. Hegel.

1804. 12 February. Immanuel Kant dies at the age of 79

What happen after Kant's Death to Kant's philosophy?

Kant is the most written about philosopher of all time – by far.

G.W.F. Hegel (1770-1831) already in 1812, complains about the negative impact of Kant for philosophy and Hegel's version of metaphysics. Hegel in the preface to his Science of Logic says the following about Kant:

“The exoteric teaching of the Kantian philosophy — that the understanding ought not to go beyond experience, else the cognitive faculty will become a theoretical reason which itself generates nothing but fantasies of the brain — this was a justification from a philosophical quarter for the renunciation of speculative thought.” (Paragraph §3, dated: March 22, 1812, Nuremberg).

The Neo-Kantians and many others came up with a surprising number of interpretations and many of them “work” and make “sense”. These are all actual concrete themes in Kant's philosophy.

1). Metaphysical misunderstanding (Fichte, early Schelling, Hegel). This is the absolutizing of reason, the absolute I.

2). Epistemological misunderstanding Marburg Neo-Kantianism. This started in the 1860s. They think that the Critique of Pure Reason is giving a theory of knowledge of mathematical and natural sciences. Heidegger remarks on this topic, "It is crucial for understanding the Kantian concept of reality. Simple uncertainty about those connections misled the entire neo-Kantian interpretation of the Critique of Pure Reason into a misguided search for an epistemology in Kant." Metaphysische Anfangsgründe der Logik im Ausgang von Leibniz, 1928 (GA 26). (The Metaphysical Foundations of Logic, E.T. p 65). Heidegger says elsewhere, "The interpretation of Kant's Critique of Pure Reason as epistemology completely misses the true meaning." (Basic Problems in Phenomenology, E.T. p. 128).

3). Psychological misunderstanding Leonard Nelson (1882-1927) and Jakob Fries (1773-1843). Gottingen Neo-Kantianism. Since this is a theory of knowledge (Erkenntnistheorie) and knowledge is a psychic process, then the Critique of pure Reason is doing some kind of psychology.

4). Combination - metaphysical, epistemological, and psychological.

5). Philology interpretation Hans Vaihinger's (1862-1933), his book and commentary on the first 70 pages of the Critique of pure Reason is in itself 1066 pages.

This of course looks like Traugott Konstantin Oesterreich's (1880-1949) first survey of Neo-Kantianism.

Oesterreich seven positions or approaches to Neo-Kantianism are:

1). Physiological (H. Helmholtz, F. Lange).

2). Metaphysical (Otto Liebmann, J. Volkelt).

3). Realist (A. Riehl).

4). Logicalist (H. Cohen, P. Natorp, E. Cassirer - Marburg School).

Hermann Cohen's Kant's Theorie der Erfahrung, Berlin, 1871. This book is often considered the founding book of Neo-Kantianism.

5). Value-theoretical criticalism, axiological (W. Windelband, H. Rickert, H. Munsterberg, Baden School). Perhaps Max Scheler and B. Bauch.

6). Relativist remodeling of criticalism (G. Simmel).

7). Psychological remodeling deriving from J. Fries (neo-Friesian school, L. Nelson).

Otto Liebmann's aphorism: "You can philosophize with Kant, or you can philosophize against Kant, but you cannot philosophize without Kant."

Wilhelm Windelband (1848-1915) made the famous claim that; "All nineteenth-century philosophers are Kantians." Neo-Kantianism was a major philosophical movement during the last 200 years. How does the Neo-Kantianism's problematic still shape the current philosophical landscape and any possible reading of Kant? Contemporary thinking has to work on the following questions. Can we go beyond Kant? Can we go beyond the Neo-Kantians? The totally misguided epistemology interpretation of Kant's is still the dominant interpretation today. Only by going back to truly re-reading

Kant's writings, that we can ever think of revealing Kant's authentic problematic and insights.

Kant's letter 1781, which shows us some of his foundationalism,

“This sort of investigation will always remain difficult, for it includes the metaphysics of metaphysics. Yet I have a plan in mind according to which even popularity might be gained for this study, a plan that could not be carried out initially, however, for the foundations needed cleaning up, particularly because the whole system of this sort of knowledge had to be exhibited in all its articulation.” To Marcus Herz, about May 11, 1781. (AK 10:269).

How should we read Kant?

Finally let us look back to what Kant himself thought, wrote and published in his major work. I think this is indication of how Kant understood the encounter methodology of reading philosophical systems. Kant wrote:

"I note only that when we compare the thoughts that an author expresses about a subject, in ordinary speech as well as in writings, it is not at all unusual to find that we understand him even better than he understood himself, since he may not have determined his concept sufficiently and hence sometimes spoke, or even thought, contrary to his own intention." (Critique of Pure Reason. (A314/B370. Year 1781, 2nd edition 1787).

“Ich merke nur an, daß es gar nichts Ungewöhnliches sei, sowohl im gemeinen Gespräche, als in Schriften, durch die Vergleichung der Gedanken, welche ein Verfasser über seinen Gegenstand äußert, ihn sogar besser zu verstehen, als er sich selbst verstand, indem er seinen Begriff nicht genugsam bestimmte, und dadurch bisweilen seiner eigenen Absicht entgegen redete, oder auch dachte.”

Also in the Prolegomena, Kant remarks “because the author himself did not even know.” (‘weil die Verfasser selbst nicht einmal wußten’ AK 4:270. 1783).

Heidegger says, "Discovering 'Kant in himself' is to be left to Kant philology" (Kant and the problem of metaphysics, et. page 175). Heidegger says in his work on Hegel the following about his own Kant interpretation: "Kant - - people refuse to see the problem and speak rather of my arbitrarily reading my own views into Kant" (Hegel's Phenomenology of Spirit, et, page 147). This was written when the reviews of Heidegger's Kant and problem of metaphysic were first being published.

In the Preface to the Second Edition (June 1950) to Kant and problem of Metaphysics, Heidegger says, "Readers have taken constant offense at the violence of my interpretations. Their allegation of violence can indeed be supported by this text." (Kant and problem of Metaphysics. et. page xx)

And then Heidegger goes on to talk about "thoughtful dialogue between thinkers" and "In a dialogue the possibility of going astray is more threatening, the shortcomings are more frequent." (Kant and problem of Metaphysics, et. page xx). So he sees this problem himself. But I think that is part of the difference between Heidegger's encounters with other thinkers in a dialogue and the presentation of philosophical positions, which tries to be philosophy; and not the philological problem of getting Kant "right". Heidegger is not making claims and counterclaims. He is not looking for proofs. Aristotle says in Book IV of the Metaphysics (1006a), "For it is uneducated not to have an eye for when it is necessary to look for a proof, and when this is not necessary."

Read Kant and the philosophers that influenced him – carefully.
